Today Kali is a “goddess”, much revered in the West by Western Wiccans and she, is even being incorporated into feminist thought as symbolic of the power that women can wield. Males who engage in the worship of Kali bow themselves to women, as they consider women to be their rightful masters. The sex ritual depicted in the pictures above of Kali dominating Shiva is a “dance” of a sexual nature, Shiva becomes the wife in this role, the term dominatrix has its origins in goddess worship. Below is a drawing of Ceres the Greek goddess of Agriculture, next to her is a photo of Opium poppies which were sacred to Ceres. The Opium poppy is a plant sacred to Lilith.

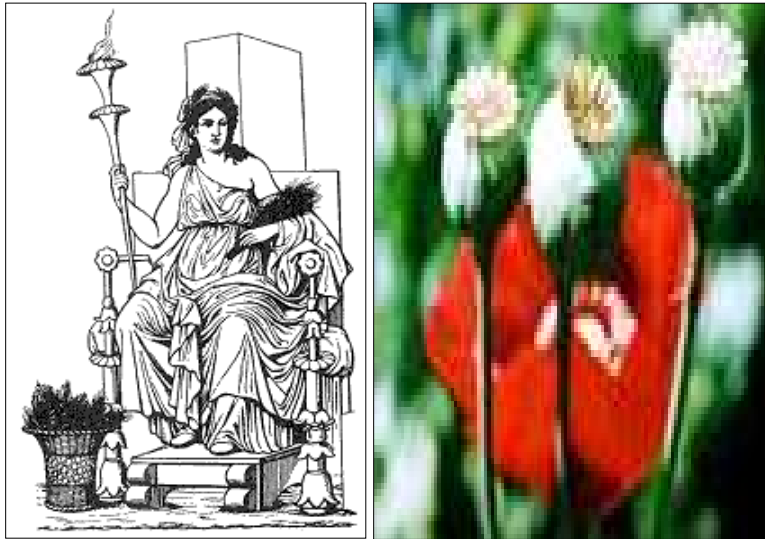

Figure: The throne of Ceres is designed to resemble a flowering poppy, her staff is also reflective of a poppy in bloom, atop the staff in its hollow Opium is burning as savor in honor of the goddess. Naturally her adherents would imbibe Opium as a means of entering ecstatic trances in order to gain contact with and to become “possessed”, by Ceres (sorcery).

Throughout this book I have stressed that all pagan cultures have their origins in fallen angels. In every culture known to man throughout the globe the same demon spirits keep appearing in mythology, folktales, epic tales and songs, art, architecture , religio- magical rites et al.

It is no coincidence that every pagan culture has a god or goddess that corresponds to another culture somewhere else, the source or power that is worshipped is one and the same in this book I call that source demons according to biblical standards.

The similarities in the practices of the Canaanites and the Hindu’s are astoundingly similar. The Canaanites worshipped the free love aspects of the Goddess Asherah.

Canaanite women refused to accept the recumbent/passive position during coitus, or to only receive vaginal penetration. Instead, the women of Canaan, like those of Greece and Sumeria, favored the active position astride the man when not engaged in fellatio or Sodomy, all the above were strictly forbidden by the God of Israel. Another interesting aspect of Lilith is the Opium poppy which is sacred to her, showing her, as Ceres, the Greek goddess of agriculture, the red rose is also sacred to her.

The red rose is representative of feminine sexuality and the white rose symbolizes the pure virgin Goddess. In ancient Canaanite ritual sacrifices, to Ashtoreth and Baal, red rose petals were sprinkled on the consecrated altar before blood was shed.

After the sacrifice had taken place, white petals were scattered in order to represent the new found purity believed to have been born from human or animal sacrifice.

Archaeological study explores drug-taking and altered states in prehistory.

(Read the article on one page).

Neanderthals on speed 60,000 years ago; Paleolithic art inspired by psilocybin or Amanita muscaria mushroom trips; and alcohol-fueled religious worship all over the world down through the ages – these are just some of the drug-taking behaviors reported in a new research paper which looked at decades of archaeological evidence to see how prevalent the use of psychoactive substances and other reality-bending practices was in prehistory. The paper also explores the link between religion and hallucinogens, stimulants, alcoholic beverages and other substances.

Elisa Guerra-Doce, an archaeologist at the University of Valladolid in Spain, says that altered states of consciousness were very nearly ubiquitous in societies throughout prehistory and history. An anthropologist who studied 488 human societies published a paper in 1973 that said 437 or 90 percent of them reportedly incorporated altered states of consciousness (ASC) into their fundamental belief systems.

Guerra-Doce looked at four types of archaeological evidence to do her study of altered states among prehistoric societies:

Fossils of burned, waterlogged or desiccated leaves, seeds, fruits or wood of psychoactive plants

Psychoactive alkaloids in skeletal remains and artifacts

Residues of alcoholic beverages

Depictions of drinking scenes or mood-altering plants inspired by inspired by altered states of consciousness

She found chemical residue from and parts of many psychoactive plant in levels of dwellings from various eras and in artifacts and human remains from thousands of years ago. People used alcoholic beverages nearly everywhere for thousands of years, mildly stimulating betel leaves in Asia as far back as 13,000 B.C., hallucinogens derived from the San Pedro cactus in the Andes as far back as 10,600 years, hallucinogenic mescal beans in Texas and northern Mexico 11,000 years ago, and peyote from between 9,000 and 5,600 years ago.

People also apparently got high on opium as the poppy was domesticated in the western Mediterranean 8,000 years ago; the mildly stimulating (among other benefits) coca leaves for tea and chewing in South America from at least 6,000 B.C.; cannabis (marijuana) in central Asia 7,000 years ago and hallucinogenic nightshade all over the world as long ago as 5,000 years. There were tobacco in the New World 4,000 years ago, hallucinogenic yopo snuff from the New World more than 4,000 years ago, and hallucinogenic mushrooms from various places and times around the world.

Guerra-Doce states in her report:

Ethnographic studies have long been exploring the place of fermented beverages (beer, fruit wines, rice wine, mead, koumiss, pulque, chicha, among many others) and psychoactive plants, not only hallucinogenic but also narcotic and stimulant (peyote cactus, morning glories seeds, sacred mushrooms, ayahuasca or yaje brew, cohoba, Virola snuffs, coca, tobacco, mescal beans, San Pedro cactus, iboga, betel, kat, pituri, cannabis, nightshade plants, opium poppy, and ephedra, just to offer a few examples) within traditional societies in every corner of the planet, above all in the Americas.

Published in Time and Mind: The Journal of Archaeology, Consciousness and Culture, Guerra-Doce's article is titled 'Psychoactive Substances in Prehistoric Times: Examining the Archaeological Evidence' (PDF link). While the article focuses on entheogens, or plants and alcoholic beverages that 'generate the divine within,' it also refers to other practices that people used to alter their reality, including auditory stimulation, exposure to extreme temperatures, food restrictions, breathing techniques, extreme physical exercise, or meditation.

Cannabis finally reached the United States at the beginning of the 20th century, arriving in the southwest from Mexico, as immigrants fled the country during the Mexican Revolution of 1910-1911. Beginning in the early 1900's, a number of state and local laws in the United States began prohibiting the use of marijuana. A federal law called the Marijuana Tax Act banned its use and sales in 1937. Prior to 1937 in the United States (and 1928 in the United Kingdom), cannabis had enjoyed a 5,000 year run as a therapeutic plant with no history of illegality.

Today, the U.S. federal government classifies marijuana as a Schedule I control substance, alongside heroin, LSD and ecstasy. In recent years, support for marijuana has increased on a national level in the U.S. with the legalization of medical marijuana in 32 states. Some nations, such as the Netherlands have decriminalized marijuana possession in coffee shops. In 2001, Portugal became the first European country to officially abolish criminal penalties for personal possession of drugs, including marijuana. In the last decade, a plethora of scientific research has emerged providing evidence for the medicinal benefits of consuming cannabis, confirming what ancient people already knew thousands of years ago.

Marijuana and Mexican Shamanism

What is Shamanism?

Shaman is defined, as per their own explanation is the following:

Shaman

'Shä-mən: From Evenki (Tungusic language of Siberia) šamān, derived from the Sumerian 'sham-an', Eagle of Heaven.

1 Sham: from the Sumerian 'shem' or 'sham' meaning 'eagle' or 'vehicle of flight'.

2) An - from the Sumerian, 'heaven' or 'celestial'.

A Shaman is:

- The Eagle of Heaven

One who flies as the Eagle into the Celestial Domains smoked or ingested otherwise).

3) One who is capable of spiritual flight (Astral Travel/Astral Projection) can be attained through the means of ingesting plant matter such as mushrooms et al or plants such as Cannabis Sativa whether

- Astral Travel is also attainable through meditation (Trance Channeling).

“The knowledge of good and evil has its beginning in Shamanism. You are in the regions of Hell now”. Quote from the book by Apostle S.D. James the Occult and Satanism 6/10/88).
“Shamanism uses techniques of ecstasy in order for men to use them their souls must be sold to Satan”, quoted from the aforementioned work.

The following is an excerpt from Terrance McKenna on Shamanic spirit contact and communication with the spirit world. His description of such is classic occultism and witchcraft.

“We are not talking about passive agents of transformation, we are talking about an intelligence, a consciousness, an alive and other mind, a spirit, which of course have no place in our society. Nature is alive and is talking to us. This is not a metaphor.” Terrance McKenna.

“From earliest times it has been recognized that knowledge goes beyond sensory awareness or the rational way of understanding the world. Entering into a communion with the plant consciousness or spirit is a way that can take us directly to an experience that can show us that there is no such thing as an inanimate object. Everything in the universe is alive, possesses awareness and has a spirit. It offers a significant challenge for the rational Western mind to come to terms with the plant spirit consciousness, and a leap of imagination is required to incorporate the ‘otherness’ of the plant. The magical world to which we are transported by plants is not accessible through the verbal rational mind but through dream language or an expansion of the imagination. Thus dreams and the power of our imagination act like “doorways” and allow us to be in communion (in the true sense) with the plant spirit consciousness” (Howard G. Chairing. He is the author of the bestselling book, Plant Spirit Shamanism (Destiny Books USA), and has published numerous articles about plant medicines).

What I've Been Taught

I've written a number of books and articles on the subject of marijuana syndromes and treating the effects and side effects of marijuana with Traditional Chinese Medicine. Here I would like to focus on what I've been taught about marijuana and Mexican shamanism.

The Shamanic Nature of Marijuana

When you first start taking marijuana, its nature connects you with your dreams, aspirations and creativity. It reprioritizes your sense of values to become more humane and authentic. It takes you through the first stages and tests of changing your perceptions of reality by transporting you from the superficial, mundane world into other realms. As I was taught, its main purpose is to help you detach from the material plane, cleanse yourself of cultural poisoning and open doors into other dimensions of possibility.

Marijuana can help you let go of appearances and materialism. But if you let it take you too far and you don't do something to balance it in your life, marijuana can also turn you into a slob that can't get anything done. It's the same energy, taken to an extreme. This is a good example of the progression of effects of a drug. If you go overboard, or get infatuated with the high of the drug, its effects will first exaggerate and then turn into their opposites.

This effect is one level of the shamanic testing arena. It's where many of the lessons of plant medicines reside. These tests are built in mechanisms, or proving grounds, that only allow those that make it through in a good way to progress further on the path. The ones who don't make it are left to the demons and psychotherapists.

Skunk Medicine

When a young child smells marijuana for the first time, they often share a simple but profound insight: Marijuana smoke smells like a skunk. Many Mexican shamans agree. Marijuana shares two main qualities with the skunk at levels of what the shamans call Skunk Medicine.

Sexual Betrayal

The first quality is sexual betrayal. This relates not only to sexual infidelity as we commonly see it on TV Novelas, or soap operas, but also has the property of betraying or trading our noble goals or ideals for sexuality and sensuality. People who are deeply involved with unbalanced marijuana use frequently seem to be somewhere in this experience.

The Black and White Energy

Another expression of skunk medicine is what the shamans call the black and white energy. This plays out as a battle of opposing ideals, usually with one side oppressing the other. This can happen both physically and on the level of values. A great example of this effect is how the police and policing relate to a definite stage of marijuana's progression through any system. The police are a social projection of the black and white energy. This stage deepens over time into a perception and projection of an oppressor, the Down Presser Man. Any survey of marijuana-influenced culture and art will provide many examples of The Man.

On a personal level, the initial phases of black and white energy help us to clarify our sense of authenticity. Over time, if the infatuation with marijuana deepens, the black and white energy plays out as polarity on every level. This polarization even happens physically as marijuana influences the user's hormones and depolarizes his/her jing sexual essence over time.

A Feminine Energetic Quality

Even though the influence of marijuana causes a depolarization of sexual essence and charge in both sexes, the Mexican shamans I've known consider the nature of marijuana to be female. This kind of female has very specific qualities. Let me explain:

Have you ever wondered where in the world the name marijuana comes from? It's not a botanical title. The word comes from Mexican shamans. We first started hearing the term marijuana here in El Norte at the end of the 1800s, when Gringo soldiers first had continuing contact with freedom fighters from Mexico, who were mostly Pancho Villa's supporters in Sonora.

So what does marijuana mean, anyway? Mari means Mary. It means Virgin in the Christian sense and all that goes along with that icon. But a Juana is a whore. (If you're deeply aching to verify the truth of this statement, click here.) This leads us into a dichotomy that is the essence of what marijuana's medicine is all about. uana sf

Marijuana and Malinche

Sexual betrayal issues can get stimulated with repeated and unbalanced contact with marijuana. We've discussed that above. They are a part of marijuana's nature. On a magical level, marijuana reflects the betrayal of materialism. She's La Chingada, she who both comforts and destroys you. She's the source of your everyday enjoyment, your array of small, but meaningful, satisfactions and the generatrix of your wretched condition. She initiates you into the tradition of Mexican goddesses who infect you with the very illnesses that they cure. She's the Virgin of Guadalupe, whose indigenous identity is linked with Malinche, the Betrayess.

Malinche's original name comes from the word Malinalli, which means weed. She was the Sun's younger sister who came to Earth many centuries ago as a powerful, wise, crazy and socially unacceptable teenage witch.

Malinalli wanted to be acknowledged and revered for who she was: a goddess. The only problem was that people couldn't deal with being around her. She challenged their values and constantly called them out on their contradictions. Because they couldn't handle her, the Aztecs abandoned her in the wilderness. They acknowledged her, but only at a distance. They went on to create their empire without directly integrating her power. But they remembered and respected her, and they knew that someday she would return.

When Malinche came back two hundred years later, she came with powerful reinforcements from outside of the realm of the Aztec imagination and worldview. She commanded a battalion of six- legged warriors, who under her skillful guidance completely destroyed the Aztec social order. Those warriors were the Spanish 'Christians' and their horses.

It took many years and over twenty million Aztec lives to play that polarity out. Aztec society ultimately resurrected itself only under Malinche's original terms. She was finally revered as a goddess. That worship continues to this day.

Malinche is teenage power. She's rebellion. She breaks through the prevailing social order and speaks what's in her heart and mind. Malinche is the essence of revolution. She's a powerful antidote for our painful journey of socialization and domestication. Her power comes from outside the box. Malinche is the Black Swan. She's evolution.

That's a lot to keep in mind if you're considering recreational experimentation with marijuana. But it's worth keeping in mind.

An Illustrative Case History Involving Millions of Test Subjects Over a Fifty-Plus Year Time Span

What hypothesis is complete without a research study that examines a very large number of random test subjects? For a very accurate illustration of what the shamans have observed regarding the nature of marijuana, I offer a cross-sectional example: Let's observe and review the general effects of marijuana on the Hippie movement in the 1960s.

Reordering Values

Marijuana 'Turned On' an entire generation. It pushed those who became most besotted with its effects to reorder their sense of values. They did this to the point that they dropped out of contemporary society.

The Hippies created their own communities based on ideals that they felt were closer to what was real for them. Spontaneity, peace and love were the buzzwords of the day. They eschewed materialism and all of its trappings. It's hard for us to understand today how radical it was for the Hippies to do what they did. That was a very conservative and dangerous time. The status quo wasn't questioned, and the U.S. was at war. Back then you could get killed for being a Hippie. It wasn't a fashion statement. It was a serious revolutionary act.

From Love to Sensuality to Sexuality

Before long, the Hippies came to a place where their idealism of love took a dark turn. Their collective principle of love wiped out in the magnetism that descends into sensuality and sexuality.

Immaturity, lack of spiritual guidance and the absence of a clan of wise elders left the Hippies rudderless in a world of energy they didn't rightfully belong in. They played out a perverted betrayal of their aspiring collective dream for the basest sensuality. Hippie dress got loose. They stopped bathing. They let themselves get all hairy as they connected with their own foul, dissociated projection of the Earth. They traveled west to Haight Ashbury, tripping out on their skin, their pores and an infinity of tiny details while their dreams slowly separated from reality step by step.

Paying the Price

In the parlance of the shamans, the Hippie movement was devoured by denizens of the underworld. This generation of castaway souls traveled into places that they shouldn't have been without being granted the proper permission or protection. They paid the price.

Hippie ideals of peace and love twisted and hardened as the young and innocent children of the Summer of Love explored and clashed with the Black and White energy of the collective. Conflict became the keynote of the times, ultimately ending with the Manson family and the proclamation of the Black and White War. Peace and love went full circle to become its opposite.

From a Mexican Shaman's point of view, none of this comes as a surprise. In the absence of the guiding light of wisdom and spiritual tradition, any foray into the other worlds assisted by plant medicines will lead to a disaster.

It's All About the Nature of Marijuana

The outcomes of this particular disaster could have been foretold from the get go with any basic familiarity with the nature of the marijuana. Moreover, this catastrophe could have been avoided altogether if the Hippies would have taken traditional measures to balance their use of marijuana. They could have done it by taking marijuana along with other medicinal herbs and performing specific rituals whenever they used it. Who knows where we would all be right now if they had taken those simple steps.

The Story Continues...

But the shamanic nature of marijuana tells us the story of the Hippies isn't over yet.

Healing and Spiritual Traditions that Use Cannabis

A depiction of the churning of the world in the ancient Indian creation myth.

Most people are startled to find out that every major pharmacy in America offered cannabis tinctures as medicine until the 1930's when cannabis prohibition began in the US.(1)

Cannabis has been used for over a thousand years by most of the world's great cultures as a medicine. Most people in the west are unaware that many ancient cultures also recognized the value of cannabis as an aide to spiritual practice.

Like any powerful medicinal plant, the energies of the plant must be used in a way that harnesses its basic properties to promote health and healing. When used correctly it can have a profound, enlightening effect.

For this reason, sects within Tibetan Buddhism, Hinduism, Taoism, Sufism and a variety of other religious groups have used cannabis for spiritual practices. Below is a brief overview of cannabis spiritual history compiled through various textual and online sources with a focus on ancient spiritual practices.

Cannabis Use in India

Cannabis has been used in Ayurvedic and Indian medicine for at least three thousand years to treat a variety of health conditions, including nausea and wasting syndromes. It is also prescribed for general health and longevity. To this day body builders in India use cannabis as a part of their training regimen to gain muscle mass, promote digestion, and build strength.

The spiritual aspects of cannabis are considered so profound in South Asia that many religious groups including Buddhists, Naths, Shaivites and Goddess Worshipers(2) have incorporated it into meditation practices, as a means to stop the mind and enter into a state of profound stillness, also called Samadhi.

Cannabis holds a prominent place among Tantrics in India, Nepal, Sikkim, and Tibet to this day. In the Mahayana tradition of Buddhism, it is said that Buddha subsisted for six years on nothing but hemp seeds.(3) Various spiritual texts, including the Buddhist Tara Tantra,(4) list cannabis as an important aide to meditation and spiritual practice. In the Tantric Buddhism of the Himalayas and Northern India, cannabis still plays a significant role in meditative rituals to facilitate deep meditation and heighten awareness.

Cannabis is even mentioned in the Indian creation myth, where it is named as one of the five nectars of the gods and designated a “Reliever of Suffering.” In the original myth, the gods churn the Ocean of Milk in search of Amrita, the elixir of eternal life. One of the resulting nectars was cannabis. In the Vedas cannabis is referred to as a “source of happiness.”(5)

In India today, cannabis is often made into a drink consumed by local people and is said to be the favorite drink of Indra, the king of the Indian gods.

Cannabis is most closely associated with the worship of Shiva, one of the three principal deities of India. Cannabis is considered Shiva’s favorite herb due to its spiritual properties. It is commonly consumed by Shaivite yogis, ascetics, and worshippers of Shiva, as an aid to their sadhana (spiritual practice). Wandering ascetics, known as sadhus, are often seen smoking cannabis out of a clay chillum as a part of their spiritual practice. (6)

One of the most commonly consumed preparations of cannabis in India is called Bhang. Bhang is offered to Shiva images and statues throughout India, especially on the festival of Shivratri.

Cannabis is such an important part of the religious culture of Benaras, the main city of Shiva worship, that it is sold in government-run shops and used by pilgrims and common folks alike, being part of the religious culture.(7)

In reviewing the use of cannabis in India, the Indian Hemp Drugs Commission conducted a government study on the matter and made the following conclusions in their report:

"...It is inevitable that temperaments would be found to whom the quickening spirit of bhang is the spirit of freedom and knowledge. In the ecstasy of bhang the spark of the Eternal in man turns into the light the murkiness of matter.

"...Bhang is the Joy-giver, the Sky-filler, the Heavenly-Guide, the Poor Man's Heaven; the Soother of Grief...No god or man is as good as the religious drinker of bhang...The supporting power of bhang has brought many a Hindu family safe through the miseries of famine. To forbid or even seriously restrict the use of so gracious an herb as the hemp would cause widespread suffering and annoyance and to large bands of worshipped ascetics, deep-seated anger. It would rob the people of a solace on discomfort, of a cure in sickness, of a guardian whose gracious protection saves them from the attacks of evil influences..."

Ayurvedic and Indian doctors still prescribe cannabis to treat a range of conditions. Slowly the west is finally beginning to recognize the true values of this remarkable plant.

Cannabis Use in China

Hemp has a long history in China. At one point it was so prized that the Chinese called their country "the land of mulberry and hemp." Cannabis was a symbol of power over evil and in emperor Shen Nung's pharmacopoeia and was called the "liberator of sin." The Chinese believed that the legendary Shen Nung first taught the cultivation of hemp in the 28th century B.C. Shen Nung is credited with developing the sciences of medicine from the curative power of plants. So highly regarded was Shen Nung that he was deified and today he is regarded as the Father of Chinese medicine.

A Chinese Taoist priest wrote in the fifth century B.C. that cannabis was used in combination with Ginseng to set forward time in order to reveal future events. It is recorded that the Taoists recommended the addition of cannabis to their incense burners in the 1st century A.D. and that the effects thus produced were highly regarded as a means of achieving immortality. In the early Chinese Taoist ritual, the fumes and odors of incense burners were said to have produced a mystic exaltation and contribution to wellbeing.

Cannabis Use in Japan

Hemp was used in ancient Japan in ceremonial rights and for purification with an emphasis on driving away evil spirits. In Japan, Shinto priests used a gohei, a short stick with undyed hemp fibers to create sacred space and purity. According to Shinto beliefs, evil and purity cannot exist alongside one another, and so by waving the gohei the evil spirit inside a person or place would be driven away. Clothes made of hemp were especially worn during formal and religious ceremonies because of hemp's traditional association with purity.

Cannabis Use in Ancient Iran

Ancient Iran was the source for the great Persian Empire. According to Mircea Eliade, "Shamanistic ecstasy induced by hemp smoke was known in ancient Iran." In the Zend-Avesta, hemp occupies the first place in a list of 10,000 medicinal plants.

One of the few surviving books of the Zend-Avesta, called the Venidad, "The Law Against Demons", calls bhang (marijuana) Zoroaster's "good narcotic," and tells of two mortals who were transported in soul to the heavens where, upon drinking from a cup of bhang, they had the highest mysteries revealed to them.

Cannabis Use in Ancient Europe

According to Nikolaas J. van der Merwe (Department of Archaeology, University of Cape Town, South Africa) the peasants of Europe have been using cannabis as medicine, ritual material, and to smoke or chew as far back as oral traditions go.

The famous Greek philosopher Herodotus wrote about the use of cannabis by the Scythians, whose cultural practices he observed and wrote about.

According to Herodotus cannabis was an integral part of the Scythian cult of the dead wherein homage was paid to the memory of their departed leaders. Cannabis has been found in Scythian tombs dated from 500 to 300

B.C. Along with the cannabis, a miniature tripod-like tent over a copper censer was found in which the sacred plant was burned.

Cannabis Use in Africa

In south central Africa, cannabis is held to be sacred and is connected with many religious and social customs. Cannabis is regarded by some sects as a magical plant possessing universal protection against all injury to life, and is symbolic of peace and friendship. Certain tribes consider hemp use a duty.

Members of the Rastafari movement use cannabis as a part of their worship of God and for Bible study and meditation. Rastafarians see cannabis as a sacramental and deeply beneficial plant and consider it to be the Tree of Life mentioned in the Bible. Bob Marley, amongst many others, said, "The herb ganja is the healing of the nations." The use of cannabis, and particularly the use of large pipes called chalices, is an integral part of what Rastafarians call "reasoning sessions" where members join together to discuss life according to the Rasta perspective.

According to Rastafari philosophy, "the herb is the key to new understanding of the self, the universe, and God. It is the vehicle to cosmic consciousness" and is believed to burn the corruption out of the human heart. (8)

Cannabis Use and Islam

It is interesting to note that the use of hemp was not prohibited by Mohammed (570-632 A.D.) while the use of alcohol was strictly prohibited. Despite the fact that Mohammed did not disallow cannabis, orthodox groups of Muslims today consider cannabis to be forbidden.

However, many historical groups of Muslims considered hemp as a "Holy Plant." Medieval Arab doctors used hemp as a sacred medicine which they called among other names kannab. The Sufis (Muslim mystics) originating in 8th century Persia used hashish as a means of stimulating mystical consciousness and appreciation of the nature of Allah. They maintained that hashish gave them otherwise tremendous interiority and basic insight into themselves. They also claimed that it gave happiness, reduced anxiety, and increased music appreciation. (9)

According to one Arab legend Haydar, the Persian founder of the religious order of Sufis came across the cannabis plant while wandering in the Persian mountains. Usually a reserved and silent man, when he returned to his monastery after eating some cannabis leaves, his disciples were amazed at how full of spirit he was. His disciples went out into the mountains and tried the cannabis themselves. So it was, according to the legend, that the Sufis came to know the pleasures of hashish.(10)

Abel, Earnest. Introduction to A Comprehensive Guide to Cannabis Literature.

The heroin epidemic resembles the days when “Crack cocaine” became the major drug that destroyed communities across the United States and other parts of the world including the Caribbean that began in the early 1980’s. The Crack epidemic coincidentally began around the same time when the Iran-Contra Scandal was being exposed. U.S. cities such as Los Angeles, Miami and New York City experienced a rise in crime and disease. The Center for Disease Control (CDC) reported back in 2015 that “heroin use in the United States increased 63% from 2002 through 2013.” Fast forward to 2016, heroin is sweeping across the United States at unprecedented levels.

According to an NBC affiliate reported that state officials were set to declare a “public health emergency” in New Haven, Connecticut over the rise of heroin use which has resulted in two deaths:

Officials in New Haven on Friday were set to address a public health emergency declaration brought on by a rash of heroin overdoses in the city beginning Thursday. New Haven police said emergency responders saw at least 15 overdoses since Thursday afternoon, and possibly up to 22. At least two people have died. The city is warning residents that there is a batch of tainted, life-threatening heroin on the streets

In the suburbs of Long Island, NY, heroin use is an increasing problem. According to www.suburbanheroin.com a website devoted to the heroin epidemic on Long Island states that in 2012 – 2013 more than 242 people died from heroin use. Long Island is home to some of the wealthiest communities in New York State which goes to show that heroin is affecting all neighborhoods rich and poor. The NBC news report said that the CDC admitted that heroin has become an epidemic since 2002

“The CDC reports that between 2002 and 2014 the rate of heroin-related overdose deaths more than quadrupled and more than 10,500 died nationwide in 2014.”

Now the question is why heroin use has dramatically increased since 2002? Maybe the U.S. invasion of Afghanistan in October 2001 after the September 11th attacks under the Bush regime had something to do with it? The main-stream media (MSM) establishment mouthpiece The Washington Post admitted in 2006 that heroin production in Afghanistan “broke all records” while under U.S. occupation:

Opium production in Afghanistan, which provides more than 90 percent of the world's heroin, broke all records in 2006, reaching a historic high despite ongoing U.S.-sponsored eradication efforts, the Bush administration reported yesterday.

In addition to a 26 percent production increase over past year — for a total of 5,644 metric tons — the amount of land under cultivation in opium poppies grew by 61 percent. Cultivation in the two main production provinces, Helmand in the southwest and Oruzgan in central Afghanistan, was up by 132 percent

Washington claims that Mexico is the source of the heroin that is flooding U.S. streets “with 10,500 hectares under poppy cultivation in 2012” while Afghanistan had “224,000 hectares” according to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) in a 2014 report but the numbers tell a different story. Mexico's heroin trade is small in comparison although it has been increasing its production capabilities.

However, not only heroin from Afghanistan is the major source for U.S. citizens, “Big Pharma”, or the ‘corporate drug dealers’ who sell “legal drugs” also have a hand in the epidemic because they produce and sell ‘Opioids’ such as Oxy Contin and Percocet which is similar to heroin. Opioid medications are normally used as painkillers for broken bones, lacerations or post-surgery pain. However, abusing Opioids can also lead to heroin use.

The online news source The Huffington Post published an article titled ‘Ron Paul Had Accurate Conspiracy Theory: CIA Was Tied To Drug Traffickers’ highlights what the former Libertarian Presidential nominee Dr. Ron Paul said on the involvement of the CIA in the drug trade which was not a “Conspiracy Theory” but a fact when taking into consideration the Iran-Contra Scandal:

In 1988, while running for president on the Libertarian Party ticket, he highlighted yet another conspiracy theory, and this one doesn’t collapse under investigation: The CIA, Paul told a gathering of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, was involved in trafficking drugs as part of the Iran-Contra debacle.

Drug trafficking is “a gold mine for people who want to raise money in the underground government in order to finance projects that they can’t get legitimately. It is very clear that the CIA has been very much involved with drug dealings,” Paul said. “The CIA was very much involved in the Iran-Contra scandals. I’m not making up the stories; we saw it on television. They were hauling down weapons and drugs back. And the CIA and government officials were closing their eyes, fighting a war that was technically illegal”

The Taliban banned the production of opium in 2000. The War in Afghanistan was mainly about producing opium which did end up in the streets of Iran, Russia and China. According to a Pravda report in 2015 by William Edstrom titled ‘Heroin Dealer in Chief. Afghanistan, Source of 90% of The World’s Heroin’ stated the impact of Afghanistan’s opium production on neighboring countries:

Afghanistan, source of 90% of Earth's heroin, ended 90% of Earth's heroin problems when Taliban outlawed opium in 2000. The reason for War in Afghanistan was because Taliban outlawed opium growing which ended economic wars (opium wars) against Iran, Russia and China

The heroin epidemic is now affecting cities and towns across the U.S. Edstrom estimates that 165,000 American's will die from the heroin epidemic in the next 10 years:

The War in Afghanistan began as an opium war against Iran, Russia and China; the tables are turning into an opium war against Americans on track to kill 165,000 Americans (2016-2026). Americans, 5% of Earth's population, take 60% of painkillers on Earth

The death rate could go much higher considering the increasing level of poverty in the U.S. especially in the inner cities where the highest unemployment rates is among the 18-34 year olds. Many young adults will unfortunately turn to the drug trade whether they sell or use as hope fades for the lack of jobs or opportunities.

Fox News had a segment with Geraldo Rivera that shows how the U.S. government (in this case, the U.S. Marines) is involved in Afghanistan's heroin production with Washington's approval of course. Watch Video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=AgKmJESBFsw>

Heroin is a valuable commodity as long as the War on Drugs remains in effect, that's why Obama extended the Afghan mission until 2017, for the next U.S. elected president to occupy the White House. If it's Hillary Clinton, U.S. troops will remain in Afghanistan indefinitely. Trump might do the same, but that still remains to be seen. On July 7th, 2015 NBC reported on Afghanistan's opium production and where they stand in terms of world supply

“According to the United Nations, the war-torn nation provides 90 percent of the world's supply of opium poppy, the bright, flowery crop that transforms into one of the most addictive drugs in existence.” NBC also quoted John Sopko, the Special Inspector General for Afghanistan Reconstruction who did say that “Afghanistan has roughly 500,000 acres, or about 780 square miles, devoted to growing opium poppy. That's equivalent to more than 400,000 U.S. football fields — including the end zones.”

That's a large amount of land devoted to opium production which provides an opportunity for the CIA to cash in on the illegal drug trade for their secret covert operations (which avoids public scrutiny) and re-establish a drug trade route to target the populations of China, Iran and Russia.

The heroin crisis then and now is a direct consequence of the Military-Industrial Complex. During the 1970's, around the same time during the Vietnam War, heroin made its way to the United States from the Golden Triangle which became an epidemic. It was estimated that more than 200,000 people in New York City alone were using heroin. At one point in time, you were able to find used syringes on public playgrounds. Now, heroin from Afghanistan has made its way back to the U.S. Heroin is profitable as much as it is strategic; it is also used as a weapon against Chinese, Iranian and Russian populations which has led to addiction, crime and helped spread diseases such as AIDS. Heroin is now affecting the United States, the CIA's very own territory. Not that the CIA really cares who it effects when you closely examine their history of drug trafficking with the Iran-Contra Scandal or the Golden Triangle during the Vietnam War as author and activist William Blum noted in his book Rogue State,

“The CIA flew the drugs all over Southeast Asia, to sites where the opium was processed into heroin, and to trans-shipment points on the route to Western customers.”

As long as the U.S. occupation of Afghanistan continues under the guise of establishing a democratic government, the flow of heroin will continue unabated. One question we should ask is “who owns the planes and the ships that transport 90% percent of the world’s heroin from Afghanistan to the rest of the world in the first place? It sure isn’t the Taliban.

A map of the Caribbean showing the illicit narcotic routes from Colombia and Venezuela.

With the Caribbean basin being so close to Colombia as this map shows, the use of the Caribbean as a drug trans-shipment point, to Europe and North America, has increased as international pressure continues to ramp up against Mexican drug cartels. William Brownfield, an assistant U.S. Secretary of State in charge of international narcotics and law enforcement affairs said: “We see this crisis coming we even have some sense as to when it will arrive”. The crisis is being fuelled by Mexican drug cartels who are responding to increased police pressure along their northern border with the United States. But there is also an element of state-supported help as countries antagonistic to the United States, such as Venezuela, work closer with drug cartels, the analysts warned.

These sentiments were underscored during a Dec. 15 hearing in front of a U.S. Senate Foreign Relations subcommittee on drug trafficking, by Sen. Robert Menendez, D-NJ, who said there seems to be a lack of urgency as violence continues to grow in the Caribbean basin.

The problem is becoming so dire in the Dominican Republic, Menendez said, that a presidential candidate in that country recently warned that his country is close to becoming “a narco-state.”

“He said that the government is incapable of stopping drug traffickers,”

Analysts with the state department say Colombian narco cartels are increasingly using Caribbean countries as trans-shipment points for drugs headed to the United States and Europe. These routes were highly popular during the 1980s when Colombian cartels made Miami and southern Florida hugely popular entry points for illicit cocaine shipments, the analysts said. “I have observed with great concern the security situation in this region,” said Liliana Ayalde, deputy administrator for the U.S. Agency for International Development and a former U.S. ambassador to Paraguay “Over the last ten years, there’s been an alarming escalation of homicides in the region,” she said.

In the 1980s law enforcement began choking off maritime trafficking at the same time that Colombian cartels were being dismantled because of international pressure, according to analysts.

Brownfield said this served to shift major drug trafficking activity to Mexico where home-grown cartels used age-old smuggling routes along the porous overland border. But the explosion of violence over the last six years in Mexico has drawn international pressure on the cartels, who are shifting operations further south in neighbouring Latin American countries.

He predicted that recent intervention efforts, targeting Central America, will begin to take hold this year, at which time the cartels are predicted to shift the smuggling routes into the waters of the Caribbean, where tiny island nations, are vulnerable and not equipped to deal the volume of money and violence, that the cartels bring with them.

“I am neither satisfied with the progress being made on the ground, nor the news and information I am receiving from the region,” Menendez said. He noted that in the Bahamas, the murder of 104 people last year set a new homicide record for that island nation that had been set only a year earlier. “But that pales in comparison to Jamaica, which has become the murder capital of the Caribbean,” Menendez said, with more than 1,400 people murdered last year.

Early signs support Brownfield’s prediction. Rodney Benson, an assistant administrator with the DEA, described an operation last July in which the DEA helped the Dominican Republic arrest a member of Mexico’s Sinaloa Cartel, who had been coordinating cocaine shipments by air from Venezuela to the Dominican Republic.

And while the arrest was counted as a successful operation, Benson said, the Dominican Republic was unprepared for the ensuing violence of reprisal that wracked the country.

Menendez said that despite this spike in violence, there are troubling signs of the drug cartels staying one step ahead of law enforcement. One example is the amount of money the U.S. government is allotting to this fight. While the focus and the funds are on Mexico and Central America, Menendez noted that funding for anti-drug efforts in the Caribbean are actually expected to drop to $73 million from $77 million a year earlier.

“If we don’t pay attention to the Caribbean,” Menendez warned, “we’re going to repeat history.”

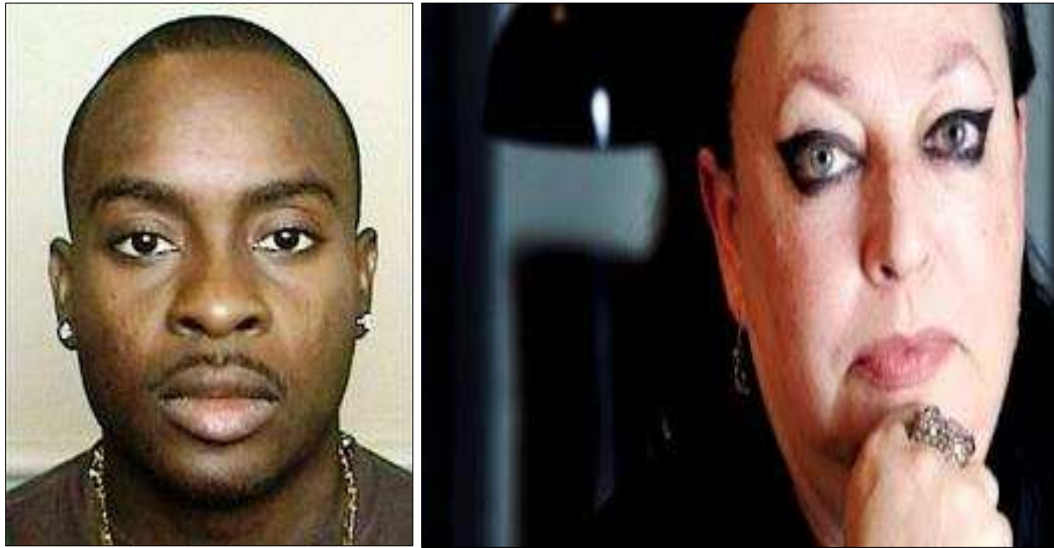

The information and statistics above offers well documented proof of a highly organized sophisticated thrust by Narco Cartels, out of Mexico in Collusion with Colombians and other South American countries and most recently Caribbean islands, like Belize, Venezuela, the Dominican Republic and others as transshipment points for drugs destined for Europe and America.

Figure:

I indicated since 2003 that the Mara Salvatrucha or MS 13 , and the Trinitarios (the Dominican gang active throughout the US , St Thomas, St Croix, Belize and peripherally through proxies in some Antillean islands), are the proxies of some powerful Mexican “narco-cartels” . Increasingly Caribbean gangs are as I have stated previously, displaying certain characteristics most often associated with terrorist organizations i.e. kidnappings used as a political bargaining chip whilst simultaneously using kidnapping as a revenue stream, their use of highly sophisticated military grade weapons, tactics of dismemberment of rivals and even civilians as a means of sowing terror and fear in their opposition, local populations and the elite within the state apparatus. One of the most recent contemporary examples of a narco-state in the making is Sint Maarten, a former Dutch colony and formerly part of the now non-existent Netherlands Antilles.

Figures 1-2: In photo's Shurendy Quant and his Dutch Goth celebrity lawyer Inez Wiske. A potent example of the preceding and the impact of Urban American gang-culture on the Caribbean is that of the No Limit Soldiers (NLS), a crime syndicate originating in Koraalspecht Curacao. Their exploits can be read about, in most Dutch media outlets in Holland and the islands of the former Dutch colonies in the Caribbean.

The crime syndicate is involved in various criminal enterprises, “Another major activity of the gang are contract killings. The gang is known for operating murder-for-hire squads that are used to eliminate rival drug trafficking operations in Curaçao as well as in the Netherlands. Colombian crime groups as well as criminal organizations from the Dutch Penose are known for doing business with the Afro-Curaçaoan gang in the committing of contract killings”.

Wikipedia, not the most reliable information source on the internet, contains clear facts that can be gleaned from police reports, local and international media. In April of 2013 Arthur Hall Senior News Editor of The Gleaner a leading Jamaican publication wrote an article on April 16 2013 wherein it was stated that: “Curacao National Sent Home From Jamaica Awaiting Further Deportation”.

The Curaçao national who was deported from Jamaica under controversial circumstances last week is now in custody in that country awaiting deportation to the Netherlands to answer several charges.

The 30-year-old Shurandy Quant, otherwise called 'Tyson' and 'Padmore', was taken into custody immediately on arrival in Curaçao last Thursday.

"He is wanted in Holland to answer charges so the authorities there asked Jamaica to arrest him, and they deported him back to the country from which he arrived, so they sent him here," said Norman Serphos, public relations officer for the Public Prosecutor in Curaçao.

"He is being held here while we await the green light from Jamaica, where the matter is to be settled," added Serphos.

The matter that has to be settled relates to efforts by lawyers representing Quant to prevent his deportation.

Attorneys-at-law Carolyn Reid-Cameron and Chukwuemeka Cameron have argued that Quant was deported despite a Supreme Court order that he should be allowed to stay in the island until the case was settled.

Due process not followed

They contended that due process and the rule of law were not followed.

But the police are claiming that while they were aware of an application in the Supreme Court, they received no instruction that impacted the deportation order signed by National Security Minister Peter Bunting.

The lawyers have indicated that they have been instructed to initiate contempt of court charges against Bunting.

Quant is described as a very violent, wealthy and sophisticated world drug trafficker who fled to Montego Bay, St James, to avoid capture.

According to international law-enforcement agencies, members of his organisation are tattooed 'NLS - No Limit Soldier' on their hands and 'TRU - The Real Underworld' on their chest back or head.

They also wear chains with the associated insignia NLS/TRU.

It is feared that Quant would use his considerable wealth earned through the illegal drugs trade to corrupt the local police.

"I know that he is wanted for trial in connection with a drug case, but there are others," Serphos told The Gleaner.

Quant subsequently won the case enumerated above. Now the question in my mind is which, street gang has the financial wherewithal and the obvious legal representation that Shurendy Quant and his No Limit crime syndicate has available to them? Certainly not in the case of Afro-Caribbean males in the impoverished Caribbean context. Shurendy Quant is unequivocally one of the executives of a well-oiled, sophisticated, money generating enterprise.

There are clear facts that can be gleaned from police reports, local and international media and the various snitches, that have absconded from NLS. One such snitch/rat being Anthony Bertinus aka "Pencho". Bertinus stated publicly in an interview with Margriet Martinus who worked for the Dutch magazine ® Niuwe Revu, the photographer for the piece was Sinaya Wolfert.

Bertinus stated in an interview with the Volkskrant a Dutch newspaper that he knows who ordered the hit on Helmin Wiels; I will include excerpts from the interview herein. The article was written by Charlotte Huisman dated 8, September 2016. The article was of course written in Dutch, I have translated said article for my readership. The article was captioned as follows: "How Three Rich Casino Bosses made 600,000 Euro's available To Assassinate Helmin Wiels".

Who gave the orders to assassinate Helmin Wiels? Anthony Bertinus knows first-hand. He told his story to the judicial authorities on Curaçao, but his name was "leaked" to the press. "My death sentence", Anthony stated that's why I want to tell my side of the story". "Anthony Spencer Bertinus (50) is in a Dutch jail, behind the glass in a freezing cold room. Bertinus is in jail for an armed robbery on a Marijuana plantation, which he committed several years ago, while he resided in Holland. He was extradited to Holland to serve his sentence. He will talk to us about, his intimate knowledge of the assassination plot, to liquidate Helmin Wiels and the principals and financiers of said plot”.

“Bertinus gave a detailed statement to the Public Prosecutor on Curacao, ‘with the understanding that my name would not be revealed’, but the Public Prosecutor named him in an earlier hearing as a ‘witness’. His name appeared in a report in the local newspaper Amigoe on Curaçao, as a witness”. Commenting on the report in Amigoe Bertinus said: “That felt like my death sentence, now that it doesn’t matter anymore, I want to tell my side of the story”.

“Even behind bars in the Netherlands Bertinus is not safe. He was threatened recently, by a fellow inmate from Curaçao. The man said to him that: ‘Pencho I know that you are marked for death. There is a price on your head and I want to cash it!’”

“Bertinus begins to talk....about the most volatile question on Curaçao, ‘who murdered Helmin Wiels?’ Bertinus says that he grew up in Koraalspecht with Burney F aka ‘Nini’, the former campaign manager of Jorge or George Jamaloodin. Jamaloodin was a former Finance Minister in the Cabinet of the then Prime Minister Gerrit Schotte.

Gerrit Schotte's party the MFK is now once again a part of the government in Curacao's Parliament. Gerrit Schotte is the same individual that the criminal Penchu and many other's including the Public Prosecutor's on Curacao, has linked to the murder of Helmin Wiels, why then is this individual a participant in the political process? The insanity of the matter boggles the mind.

Wiels center campaigning in better times.

Wiels lying dead on the Mari Pampoen beach in October 2012 photo © Michael Kooren for Reuters.

“Bertinus specifically named lotto boss Robbie Dos Santos, the Sint Maarten based casino boss Francesco Corallo has been (named as an ‘important person in the Sicilian Mafia’ by the authorities in Italy), and a third unnamed person, as being the principals in, financing, authoring and ordering the assassination of Mr. Helmin Wiels”.

“More than three years after the murder of Helmin Wiels, the Public Prosecutor on Curacao, launched a preliminary hearing against “Nini. The Public Prosecutor claims that “Nini”, is the link to the three big bosses and the hired killers. Bertinus and “Nini” know each other from their younger years growing up in the same No Limit Soldier stronghold, the Koraalspecht neighborhood”. Bertinus said that “Nini”, was good friends with his elder brothers”.

“Bertinus said in his statement to the Public Prosecutor, that “Nini”, confided in him that: ‘The three gambling bosses each contributed 400,000 Antillean Guilders, which amounted to 1.2 million guilders the equivalent of 600,000 Euro or 650,000 US dollars. “Nini”, told me that Wiels did not keep his mouth shut, about the corruption in the gambling and casino industries on Curacao, which led to his assassination. “Nini” thought that I would adhere to the ‘no snitching’ code. What he didn’t know was that my father had been friends with Mr. Wiels”.

“Bertinus told us his life story” (some of which I have excerpted in the following). “When I was 17, I moved from Curacao to Rotterdam. In Rotterdam I started a career as an armed robber. I was eventually locked up in prison. After having been released from prison. At the age of 23 I was the European Kickboxing champion. In Rotterdam with its large Antillean community, he met people from his old neighborhood Koraalspecht. Some of them were members of the No Limit Soldiers (NLS)”.

“After his father died Bertinus returned to Curacao. He saw how drastically Curacao had changed. Barely a week after he returned, Helmin Wiels was murdered by members of NLS from his neighborhood”.

“Bertinus went to work as ‘security’ at the “Haifu Minimarket”, in Koraalspecht. He also did odd jobs, for Michael L a member of NLS. One day Michael told Bertinus to go to “Nini”, who they heard had contracted NLS members to execute the contract on Helmin Wiels’ head.

The executives in NLS were furious that their people were involved in the hit and wanted to see money! They demanded that “Nini”, pay them 25,000 Euro. “We know that you were instrumental in orchestrating the hit”. Bertinus told ‘Nini’.

“In the case file of the hearing on August 2014, there are three statements by Bertinus against the organizers of the Wiels hit. The actual statements were made by Bertinus in February, 2014. Then he was imprisoned, on suspicion of the attempted extortion of ‘Nini’. Bertinus claims that he has changed his life and wants to do well by his island, Curacao. He says that: “I was shocked, to see children as young as, 13 and 14 years old, walking around with guns and openly sympathizing with the No Limit Soldiers. The new generation of gangsters, do not have an ethical code. There is only senseless violence. He said that Curacao is held, too tightly in the grip of the mafia. ‘Everything is being taken over and robbed, by criminals, the harbor, water and electricity companies, the casinos. My island is the scapegoat, everything is becoming more expensive and there is hardly anyway one can make an honest living. The youngsters in Koraalspecht see the expensive cars, that the gangsters ride around in and they also want to be gangsters. While the gangbangers continue to do the dirty work for the, crime bosses’.

‘I stand by what I say; even if it costs me my life, the crime bosses must not evade justice this time. I do not want my beautiful island to be ruined’.

The naming of Elvis Kuwas and Damascus as bonafide members of the NLS does not fit with the proven image of the NLS. The NLS is a very modern, highly regimented and organized criminal syndicate that is consciously, franchising, branding and consolidating small street gangs both on Sint Maarten and in Holland. A real NLS member is either branded with a tattoo like the one above on the right shoulder of the man in the photo, or they wear the syndicate's logo of the tank on their chain. Within that gangs culture only highly ranked members are allowed diamonds and other precious stones in the medallion of the tank logo, more diamonds and precious stones marks the wearer as a shot-caller (general) within the crime syndicate. The two men Elvis Kuwas aka Monster and Dangelo Damascus were not identified in the media as having any specific tattoos indicating their allegiance to or membership within the NLS crime syndicate. There is however evidence that proves Kuwas, was being used as an assassin by the group, specifically to hunt down Erwin Juliana, the highly ranked BVC shot caller, who was killed in 2015 at the Hato International Airport, Curacao. Juliana was not killed by Kuwas, the specifics of the hunt for Juliana was highlighted in the corporate media and I will highlight some of the excerpts here.

To date Burney Fonseca aka 'Nini' was sentenced to 25 years for having orchestrated the murder of Helmin Wiels.

An explosive, detailed report in the police magazine Blauw/Blue gave detailed information culled from police reports in the city of Rotterdam and elsewhere, on the activities of the No Limit Soldiers (NLS), Buena Vista City (BVC) and a gang called Kura Piedra/Army, in the city of Rotterdam. Published on the 28 March 2015 captioned: Bendeoorlogen Binnen Het Koninkrijk/Gang Wars in The Kingdom, and written by Marielle den Breejen all photos are from the Rotterdam Eenheid or the Unit Rotterdam and ANP, here are some excerpted highlights from the report: "Members of the No Limit Soldiers and Buena Vista City street gangs, regularly come to Holland to flee rivals in Curacao and to further their criminal activities.

The gangs are caught in a fierce ongoing, violent gang war. Wherever rival factions meet, they immediately open fire on each other”.

“Curacao has a chronic problem involving criminal gangs whose members are often complicit in, armed robberies, illicit narcotics trafficking, rip-deals, and gun running. The gangs are in possession of huge arsenals of weapons. The most dominant of these gangs are the No Limit Soldiers (NLS), from the Koraalspecht area and Buena Vista City (BVC), from the Buena Vista neighbourhood”.

“A year and a half ago the Recherche Samenwerkings Team (RST) the English translation for RST is Investigative Cooperation Team (ICT), warned us (the Dutch police) that members of the NLS and BVC, were leaving Curacao for the Netherlands, according to Edward Van Meel national information coordinator of the recently established info-cel Caribbean”.

“In a section entitled: ‘Moordcommando’/Murdersquad or the Hitteam, it was stated in Blauw that: “De KMar op Schiphol treft op 26 Februari 2012 zes Kilo cocaine aan in de vleugel van een vliegtuig uit Bonaire/Curacao. On February 26, 2016, at Schiphol International Airport, personnel of the special KMar unit discovered six kilos of cocaine in the wing of a plane that transited Bonaire made a stop on Curacao, with its final destination being Schiphol. The subsequent investigation that followed consisting of Customs, KMar and FIOD, exposed a drugs-pipeline that led to the Caribbean. Eighteen suspects were arrested, among those arrested were personnel of the Schiphol International Airport and persons in the Caribbean. The Justice Department in Amsterdam made their findings public. They took that course of action, when it became clear that people within the crime syndicate responsible for the drugs transport, were blaming some of the persons responsible for the shipment of illicit narcotics with theft, such an accusation is usually cause for the accused being killed. Some of the suspects were members of No Limit Soldiers (NLS). In October of that year (2012), the investigation unit uncovered a plot led by members of NLS to liquidate a BVC shot caller (Erwin Adriano Juliana). The detectives warned Juliana that he was being hunted. In the beginning of November (2012) one of the leaders of NLS, went to Schiphol International Airport to pick up a hit man flown in from Curacao, subsequently a second hit man arrived days later. It became apparent to the investigative team, through listening to the hit teams cellphone conversations, that they were unable to find Juliana, thanks to the detectives' previously warning him, Juliana was off the grid. Towards the end of November (2012), the (Koninklijke Marechussee)/ KMar, the FIOD led by several arrest units, conducted a series of raids multiple suspects and the hired hit men, were arrested, firearms and illicit narcotics were found, several seized cellphones contained pictures of the suspects posing with firearms, money and drugs. A case was being built by the Public Prosecutors office against eight of the suspects for the establishment of and membership in an ongoing criminal enterprise. NLS head honcho Shurendy Quant aka Tyson Q, was among those arrested, however due to insufficient evidence, the presiding judge in Haarlem, ordered his predetention lifted".

The following is documented evidence from previously classified information, from the national investigation unit in the Netherlands, which proves a definite NLS presence on Sint Maarten. Sint Maartens judicial authorities and police force has yet to acknowledge the chronic problems created island wide since NLS, began operating on Sint Maarten. What follows is damning evidence of the scope and extent of the operations of NLS on Curacao, Sint Maarten and the Netherlands: "The No Limit Soldiers is a criminal syndicate with a 'military', hierarchy in Curacao, Sint Maarten and the Netherlands. The 'general' and the 'colonel' are at the head of the organization, further down several lieutenants (shot callers) issue orders to their subordinates 'soldiers'. Specific women called 'princesses' are used to fulfill supportive roles and carry out important tasks within the NLS crime syndicate one such female was Latoya Flanders (Source: DRIO Rotterdam).

Above Latoya Flanders the deceased paramour of Urvin “Nuto” Wawoe. Flanders was murdered in Sint Maarten on Thursday, September 5, 2015. She was liquidated in a reprisal shooting, in the ongoing war between Buena Vista City (BVC) and the No Limit Soldiers (NLS), both of which originate out of Buena Vista (BVC) and Koraal Specht (NLS) on the island of Curacao. The war being waged by the gangs have transcended the narrow confines of their neighborhoods on Curacao and have taken on a regional, international character. The following is quoted from Sint Maarten News online (SMN): “Based on the information SMN News received from persons within the community that know some of the gang members they said the spate of killing started after NLS leaders ordered the execution of two men at Curacao's Airport. While Urvin “Nuto” Wawoe was caught with a large amount of illegal drugs that landed him in prison on St. Maarten and a huge prison fight led authorities to send him to a prison in the Netherlands for his own safety, the other gang members are hell bent on getting revenge for the assassination of two of their members”. The two men referenced in the excerpted quote are BVC shot-caller Erwin Adriano Juliana aka Jais and his nephew. The event that precipitated the ongoing war between the both factions mentioned previously, dates to when the gangs were in a phase of “cooperation”, and were essentially allies, is as follows: “NLS is a crime syndicate that is being used by certain narco-cartels based in Colombia. As a franchise that is, essentially a muscle and protection source when huge quantities of cocaine is being shipped from Colombia to Curaçao or Sint Maarten in multi-kilo drug trafficking operations into the Netherlands and the United States. The so called Snowflakes case was just such an operation. In the Snowflakes case 623 kilos of Cocaine was shipped to Curaçao and Sint Maarten, we speak here of a transshipment operation, the ultimate destination being Europe and America. The local police on Sint Maarten “discovered” 170 kilos of Cocaine in a house in Cole Bay which led to the arrest of Miguel Arrindell and several other men, some of those men were members of the NLS. The so called Benzi case is also linked to the Snowflakes case. The Benzi case began with the theft from NLS, of several kilos of Cocaine by Buena Vista City (BVC) shot caller, Erwin Adriano Juliana aka “Jais”, this led to a contract being placed on his head by the executives within NLS. Juliana was liquidated at the Hato airport on Curaçao, in the first half of 2014. Another spurious tale being spun by the corporate media in the Netherlands Antilles is the lie that NLS travel to Colombia and purchase huge quantities of Cocaine. Due to the nature of the narcotics trafficking terrain in Colombia and the dominance of Colombian cartels outsiders rarely travel to Colombia if at all to purchase narcotics. The volume of Cocaine in the Snowflakes case point’s to the fact that Miguel Arrindell was a Warehouser of Cocaine for a Colombian cartel, NLS being a franchise that is closely linked to a cartel, functioned as muscle and security in the operation. That operation spiraled out of control resulting in the so called Vesuvius investigation which I went into at length in the post “The No Limit Soldiers Organized Crime in the Netherlands Antilles”.

The people who facilitate the operations of gangs and narco cartels within the former Netherlands Antilles are persons like Michael Römer above. Römer is a former head of the (VDC) Veiligheidsdienst Curacao or the English translation the Secret Service of Curacao. In the local media throughout the Caribbean and in the Netherlands, the saga of Römer played out here then is proof of extreme corruption and how, it facilitates narco cartels and even the murder of political rivals. Römer was appointed by the then Prime Minister of Curacao Gerrit Schotte as head of the VDC on Curacao. Römer as vassal of Schotte, who was in turn the slave of mafia figurehead Francesco Corallo, allowed Colombian criminals access to sensitive information, contained on computer hard drives at the VDC headquarter, all of the computer were destroyed and the hard drives were wiped clean of their contents.

Above Gerrit Schotte the former Prime Minister of Curacao became Primem Minister after having orchestrated the murder of Helmin Wiels, who was the legitimate Prime Minister of Curacao at the time. Here are some quotes from the Curacao Chronicle, further substantiating what was previously enumerated: “ROMA, WILLEMSTAD - Justice in Italy confirms that they have found some incriminating documents in Francesco Corallo’s possession, linking the former Prime Minister of Curacao, Gerrit Schotte with the mafia boss. This is according to Korant Veridiko. Corallo was arrested in August on suspicion of fraud at Banco Popolare. Apparently there are 150 million euros involved.

In a raid on the home of former Prime Minister in Willemstad, his office in the parliament building and the MFK party headquarters there were probably some documents found that indicate a link between Corallo and Schotte. The Public Prosecutor in Willemstad, at the mouth of press spokesman Norman Serphos indicated that they will not give any comments on ongoing investigations. The Italian media have so far made no mention of the relevant documents.

Casino owner

Francesco Corallo is a well-known casino owner in the Caribbean. He owns the Atlantis World Group, which operates several casinos in the region. In St. Maarten there are the Atlantis World Casino in Cupe Coy, Paradise Plaza in Simpson Bay and Beach Plaza in Philipsburg. The company also owns the Paradise Plaza Casino in Curacao and three casinos in the Dominican Republic. Since June 1, 2011, Corallo's holding company is registered as a Cypriot company.

Central Bank of Curaçao and St. Maarten

In the spring of 2011, Corallo was in the news on the islands of Curacao and St. Maarten. Baetsen Rudolf, CFO of the Atlantis World Group, was supported by the Prime Minister of Curacao as possible candidate for Chairman of the Supervisory Board of the Central Bank of the two islands. Many saw this as a part of Corallo's attempts to turn things into his favor to make an end to the unwelcome gambling tax. The islands also feared the influence of the Italian Mafia, which Corallo is widely known for.

Corallo ambassador FAO

A report from the Italian Bank in June 2011 provided the basis for a thorough investigation for certain loans to gaming companies, including those of Corallo. In raids in November, he relied on his diplomatic immunity by virtue of his ambassadorship to the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) on behalf of Dominica. At its headquarters in Rome, however, they had no ambassador by that name. Atlantis / Betplus then gave a press release stating that Corallo gave up his immunity to cooperate with the judicial investigation.

According to the Italian Foreign Minister, he is not even an ambassador, as he does business in Italy, and “it is inappropriate in our country as someone with business interests also enjoys diplomatic immunity.”

Italian arrest warrant

On June 2012, the Italian tax police arrested the former chairman of Banca Popolare di Milano (BPM) in connection with an investigation into questionable loans from this bank.

Massimo Ponzellini (1950), which left the Milanese bank in late 2011 and is now chairman of a construction company Impregilo, was one of three persons for which an arrest warrant was issued because of suspicion of involvement in a criminal organization.

The other two arrest warrants were related to Francesco Corallo, who is considered by the investigators as the owner of Atlantis-BPplus, and Antonio Canna Lira, also active in the gambling business and closely related to Ponzellini.

Bribes

Milan prosecutors hypothesized that there are very substantial loans provided, which departed from the evaluation procedures at the bank in exchange for 5.7 million in bribes. In searches in offices and homes owned by Ponzellini in November 2011, it proved that one of the suspicious loans was 148 million Euros to Atlantis BPplus. This was granted after the company was granted a contract with the Amministrazione Autonoma dei Monopoli di Stato (AAMS). AAMS' responsibilities are overseeing gambling and issuing permits”.

By Dick Draayer (Persbureau Curacao)

Above Francesco Corallo and Theo Heyliger, Corallo is at right in the green shirt, a scowling Heyliger sits opposite Corallo in a blue striped shirt. Heyliger is the political boss of the UP party on Sint Maarten. Heyliger has been implicated in several scandals and is called “Mr Ten Percent”, by the Dutch politicians on the islands and in the Netherlands.

The criminal Corallo being led to a court hearing, after being arrested here on Sint Maarten.

The mafia stooge Theo Heyliger, campaigning for his mafia bosses and their interest's. The actions of these people are the real cause of the new criminal trend amongst the poorer classes in the former Netherlands Antilles. Gerrit Schotte and his lackeys used the gang profiled herein the No Limit Soldiers to murder their, political rival Helmin Wiels, thereby empowering that organization. The gang has furthered their criminal pursuits far beyond their home turf of Koraal Specht Curacao, and are very active in many Caribbean islands and in Europe specifically Germany and the Netherlands. The Netherlands has a large Afro-Curaçaoan community; cells of the gang (NLS) are appearing in large Dutch cities such as Rotterdam, The Hague, Amsterdam, Lelystad and Dordrecht. Members from Curaçao cooperate with gang members living in the Netherlands to smuggle cocaine they obtain from Colombian as well as Jamaican narco-trafficking cartels, into major Dutch cities. From there the narcotic is distributed to smaller dealers. NLS as the evidence shows is a franchise that is being used as a distributor or a Distro, in the popular parlance. They are also being used as muscle to ensure the huge shipments of Cocaine coming out of Colombia to specifically Curacao and Sint Maarten are not tampered with by local cowboy criminals. The incidence of NLS absorbing certain local street elements is a brilliant move and is testament of their franchise model. NLS have and are establishing a strong local presence as is attested by their, transformation of prison politics at the Pointe Blanche Prison and their restructuring and strengthening of gang-culture locally, corporatizing it and stressing on obedience to the orders of the executives within NLS".

Above a CD cover bearing the NLS tank logo and a now deceased member Lil Homie. The very name Lil Homie is an Urban American ghetto term, it is alien to the language and true culture of Curacao. As I have wrote innumerable, both in Blog's essays and in all of my books, American urban culture specifically gang culture, is being exported globally by corporate America which is overseen by rich middle aged and older white males, but the poison that they export is cheerlead by young African American males and females. The Afro-Caribbean young people identify with the colour of their American peers and subsequently imitate the worst aspects of their culture. American urban culture and its derivative gang culture, is a negative and dangerous culture of death, made palatable by corporate greed and clever marketing tricks, in slick glossy magazines and expensive videos. The terrorism that the American corporate machine has unleashed on the world through their so called Hip-Hop music industry is nothing short of criminal. Since that culture began being adopted by Caribbean youth, the region has undergone unalterable changes that are absolutely devastating and far reaching, the impact is generational. Bear witness then to our reality in the Caribbean.

Above the public face of the NLS crime syndicate. Note the jewelry worn by Nuto, a lieutenant/Shot caller within the syndicate. Such jewelry encrusted with diamonds can easily cost anywhere from $50,000 to $100,000 dollars. Such wealth has allowed the syndicate to expand their operations, to Sint Maarten my island, and they are wreaking havoc here. Read in the following the devastation being wrought by this syndicate on Curacao.

The is from my Blog:

NO LIMIT SOLDIERS AND BUENA VISTA CITY WAGING COSTLY WAR THAT IS DEVOURING CITIZENS OF THE FORMER NETHERLANDS ANTILLES.

The former Netherlands Antilles is being portrayed in travel blogs, tourist related magazines et al, as idyllic vacation havens while that may have been the case 30 years ago, our contemporary reality is anything but ideal. The corporate media in their insane attempt to “protect”, a failed one pillar economic activity called “tourism”, have been under-reporting the true reality that citizens of the former Netherlands Antilles exist in today.

In my previous blog posts on this site and my Lionzman website <http://nazaritze-lionzman.blogspot.com/>

I have methodically deconstructed the false narrative that, these islands are “safe” places and are idyllic vacation spots. As a result of the state in the former Netherlands Antilles being abysmally and endemically toxic, criminal and corrupt, unable to govern and the state itself is a human-trafficking entity as I have shown with numerous posts on all of my sites. The state itself is a narco-trafficking entity with politicians, their family members and proxies engaging in every type of criminal activity, including prostitution and drug smuggling.

This post will be limited to the creation of the narco-states in the former Netherlands Antilles. The child of unchecked gambling based and prostitution tourism is the street gangs and crime syndicates that have sprung up in the wake of the aforementioned. These new entities though they garner much front page and headline, news they are mere bit players in the narco trafficking industry in the former Antilles. The old-guard Syrian, Lebanese, Anglo-European, Chinese, Arab multi-millionaire and billionaire families who have entrenched themselves in these islands generationally for decades are the ones importing, exporting and transshipping, voluminous amounts of illicit narcotics, human beings and automatic as well as semi-automatic weapons to and from these islands in their attempt to hold onto their hegemony, both within the illegal narcotics trade and their lucrative human trafficking trade which is tied into the prostitution sector throughout the Caribbean.

The local Afro-Caribbean crime syndicates such as NLS and BVC are mere bit-players and pawns in a grand scheme beyond their comprehension.

Since the Afro-Caribbean gangs are the “front line soldiers”, in the war for hegemony in the region’s ongoing narco-wars, I want to focus on a crime syndicate that is literally devastating Curacao and Sint Maarten’s young and vulnerable. The name of the syndicate is the No Limit Soldiers (NLS), NLS and their primary rival Buena Vista City (BVC), have both established themselves in major cities throughout Holland and it is a documented fact that NLS is operative in all the Antillean islands, Holland and other European countries and maintain strong ties to crime syndicates in Jamaica, Miami and Haiti.

My primary goal in these posts is to inform and educate people about the lived reality of the law abiding citizens of the former Netherlands Antilles. Another objective is to promote the ideology of independence as the only seriously viable option to our present neo-colonial status. My third objective is to gather a body of fact based verifiable data that will eventually be used to bring a case to the United Nations, for the total independence of Sint Maarten from Holland, not with the present criminal clans ruling the island, but with an enlightened body of leader’s who will take the island into independence and beyond.

I will now show from evidence gathered within the public domain that, the NLS is in fact an instrument that is being used to further enslave and destroy our youth. The NLS crime syndicate is consistently being portrayed as a “street gang”, yet their tactics, political clout, financial wherewithal and international, transnational and regional scope of activities place NLS, in the realm of an international organized crime syndicate, with its own media arm, that has the ability to perpetrate terrorist attacks, assassinate politicians, liquidate highly placed rivals, bribe public officials, traffic illicit narcotics through the region et al. They also serve as muscle for the transshipment of illicit narcotics, from Colombia and Mexico to the former Antilles heading to Europe. The resultant turf wars, rip-deals and drive by shootings continue unabated, claiming the lives of gangsters as well as the innocent, even children and the unborn are not exempt from the touch of death in this brutal saga.

To those who will learn I want to paraphrase my prediction from 1999 when I lived in Groningen. I wrote the following in a Souligha Youth publication in my capacity as President of said foundation:

“PURPOSE FOR OUR BURDEN OUR CONCERN.

Ladies and gentlemen: The so called Antillean in Holland is being marginalized and discriminated against not only because they are so called buitenlanders (aliens) but also because the Antillean is being used as a primary tool of advancement of the criminals that control the cocaine trade.

Any people who in large numbers in any community in the world will sell Crack Cocaine as a means of livelihood will always be despised and looked upon as men of little or no worth at all”. I wrote further that “The incidences of youth on Sint Maarten murdering their peers is as a direct result of the self-destructive policy of the illegally installed “government” since the children of those whose interests the politicians represent are not part of the prison population it may bode well for the average person to pay keen attention to what is written herein and develop some sort of awareness as this book is in fact a teaching tool which will not only highlight problems but it will offer solutions that will attempt to solve some of the most pressing of those problems.

A way to ensure that the government of Sint Maarten becomes an actual public service organ that functions in the best interest of the population at large would be to, for a special interest or pressure group government of Sint Maarten before the United Nations Tribunal of Human rights and charge the individuals within the so-called government with Human rights violations.

If such a charge is properly launched it will gain international prominence and it is on this platform that the real country Sint Maarten can be formed.

In the event of an actual formation of an independent government and country the entire population would have to literally be re-educated and deprogrammed from the miseducation and racist genocidal policies of the present system of government”.

Above Erwin Juliana, the BVC shot-caller liquidated by NLS on the HATO International Airport, Curacao.

Figure: Shafien Mauricia: who was killed by Teke Teke Snack bar in Cay Hill. He was an active member of NLS, originally from Curacao but he was operating on Sint Maarten at the time of his murder.

Figure: Above a photo taken with a cell phone and posted to Facebook by Latoya Flanders. Boss Lady can clearly be seen on the medallion on her chain TRU another handle that the so-called No Limit Soldiers (NLS), use for their crime syndicate in their media and on their clothing and tattoos.

The clearly visible tank on her chain marked her in that gang's culture as a "made", member of the syndicate. The Five stars tattooed on her breast branded her as a person who was highly placed within the crime syndicate. Judging from the evidence that the "victim" provided of her lifestyle i.e. deathstyle, I see incontrovertible proof of the young woman in question being a bonafide member of NLS who had made her bones.

Figures 1-2: The images shown above bare salient testimony to the, sophistication, organization, education and thorough understanding of modern technology and its use, for the purposes of self-promotion and branding, demonstrated by the top-tier within the No Limit crime syndicate.

The fantasy being perpetuated by the “corporate” media, that No Limit is a “street gang”, will be shattered herein. No internet attention seeker I come from the St Peters area on Sint Maarten a place known for its share of drug dealing and recently gang related liquidations and activity and I still reside in St Peters. I have not seen any public support of No Limit within my environment, however there is in areas such as Dutch Quarter and Mount William Hill a definite affiliation with the organized crime syndicate.

Figure: Above is a photo of Janishairah Jano the young woman of Curacaolinian parentage born in Holland, who was murdered earlier this year in a drive-by shooting on Curacao. Janishairah died in a hail of bullets, as the result of a revenge killing, in the ongoing war between No Limit Soldiers (NLS) and Buena Vista City (BVC). The ongoing war stems from the liquidation, in 2014 of BVC shot caller Jais and his nephew at the Hato International Airport in Curacao.

Janishairah was the girlfriend of a BVC linked man, whose brother was said to be one of the shooter's that killed this man, Luigino Victoriano Martina. Four young children were in the car with Janishairah and her boyfriend; two of the children were seriously wounded. The man driving the car was flown to Rotterdam Holland for medical treatment, where he subsequently died as a result of his severe wounds.

Above graphic proof of the toll, the imported Urban American culture is wreaking throughout, the former Netherlands Antilles.

As I have written previously the imported gang-culture brought to this region, by the corporate American money machine is the harbinger of many of the most brutal and dastardly acts ever witnessed in these islands. Although drug dealing was evident throughout the region. The appearance of young organized criminal gangs such as NLS and BVC masquerading as Hip-Hop labels are a new phenomenon, directly adopted and imported from North America, via their rap music industry. The sophistication of gang-culture in the Caribbean and its subsequent brutality is as a result of imitation of and exposure to American Urban gang-culture. I have written extensively on the culture and its dangers to the Caribbean and the linkages of gang elements, with terrorist elements in prisons the same holds true for the former Netherlands Antilles. Readers of my Blogs know that I use the present day reality, in the former Netherlands Antilles to advocate the total independence of Sint Maarten from Holland, which is a country directly responsible for much of the corruption and exploitation of the populace.

the stretcher above; the fourth child is not in the photo. The oldest boy was no older than 6. All of the children were severely wounded except the boy being held by the man wearing shorts in photo. One of the boys subsequently died as a result of his wounds.

Ecstasy pills seized in a DEA raid in the US. Ecstasy this drug is now the rage in the Caribbean, and specifically throughout the former Netherlands Antilles.

Above Ecstasy seized by the police in Guyana from a citizen of Suriname. Ecstasy is relatively easy for Dutch passport holders, to smuggle into the former Netherlands Antilles and Suriname. Although Surinamese no longer have Dutch passports, the large Surinamese diaspora in the Netherlands and throughout the former Netherlands Antilles are facilitators of ecstasy, smuggling within the region. Dutch so called autochtonen or indigenous Dutch i.e. Caucasian Dutch people are the source and creators of the ecstasy drug, coming into Sint Maarten. XTC was first produced in XTC is an acronym for 3, 4-methylendioxyamphetamine aka MDMA.

The drug called XTC was first produced in 1912. The scientists who developed XTC were seeking to produce a drug to be used to heal. XTC was found to have an effect on the central nervous system. Alexander Schulgin began experimenting with the drug on human subjects 65 years later. Psychotherapist's began giving the drug to 'patients' in their sessions ostensibly to calm them. Soon ecstasy began to be used as a 'party drug' and recreationally.

XTC is listed as a schedule 1 drug by the US government (hard-drug), and all other western governments. The photo above shows how XTC is being packaged and marketed to young children, the packaging bears the likeness of Scoobydoo the popular children's cartoons character, the words Scooby Snax are clearly visible in bold fonts on the front of the package. There can be no doubt who are the targeted users in the above shown photo.

Future an Atlanta rapper, who is enjoying mainstream success. Unfortunately his music is replete with lyrics glorifying, substance abuse, Future raps about drinking lean and popping Mollies, Molly is a popular term for XTC. This particular rapper is very popular throughout the Caribbean.

The increasing sophistication of the arms and ammunition available throughout the Caribbean is an unprecedented development that does not bode well for regional security and political stability.

Another example of the military grade weapons that are available on the street level, throughout the Caribbean.

The police in Trinidad just after Scanny Martin, Hassan Atwell and Christopher 'Monster' Selby escaped from prison in a daring jailbreak.

A shipment of drug's seized at the Rotterdam harbor in the Netherlands the illicit narcotics, originated in Colombia. However the drugs were transshipped to the Netherlands via the Caribbean island Curacao, a former colony of the Netherlands.

A drug seizure made in Puerto Rico by DEA and ICE agents.

Above the funeral of Scanny Martin one of the prison escapees profiled earlier. Note the Muslim dress of many in attendance.

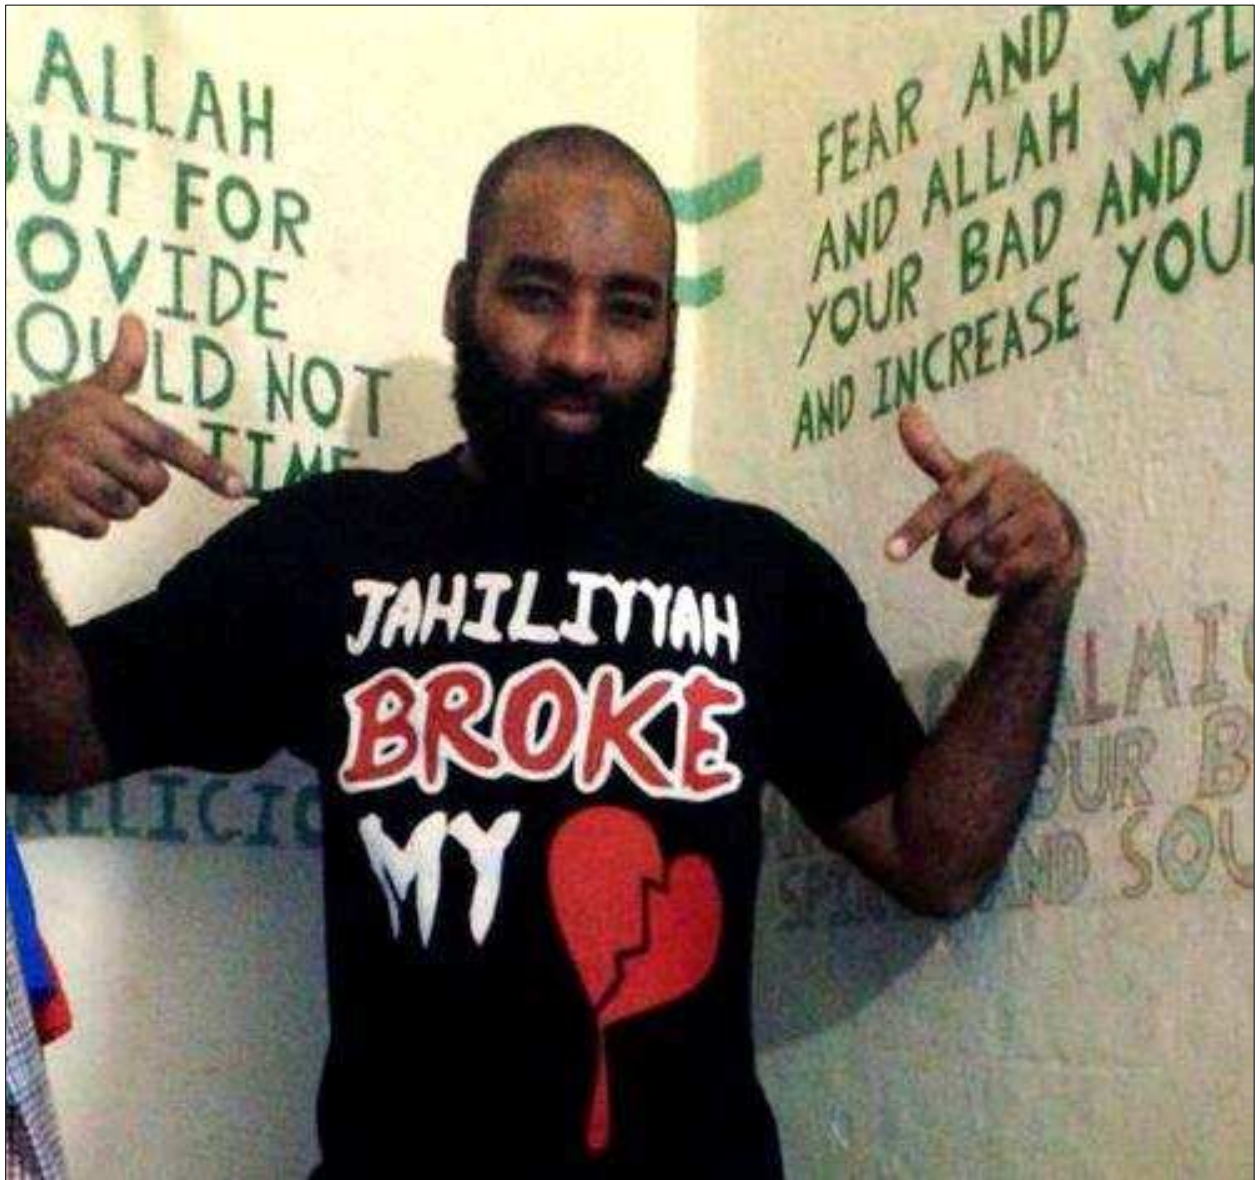

The two photos shown above bare salient testimony, to the fact that military grade weapons are being used, to settle disputes on the street level and to maintain hegemonic control of drug turfs throughout the Caribbean. Trinidad where the photos were taken by Ian Alleyne's Crime Watch studios is presently the scene of a pandemic of epic proportions in the ongoing street level gang wars, of reprisal shootings, turf disputes and personal disputes that are wreaking havoc and have already destabilized that society.

In the photo, is Hassan Atwell a potent example of what was previously enumerated. Atwell was imprisoned on a kidnapping charge he was never tried nor was he ever convicted of any crime, yet he was kept in prison for six years without his case being tried. According to his mother he became very depressed, leading her to believe it is due to his oppression at the hands of the prison authorities that resulted in the prison break hatched by him and his two cronies.

Atwell began posting on his Facebook page while imprisoned a series of posts which spoke of and foreshadowed his intentions of escaping from prison, he also expressed in his posts that he was prepared to die the death of a shaheed (martyr).

The photo above is of Omar al-Mukhtar Muslim resistance fighter who fought against the Italian colonization of Libya. Atwell posted the following post alongside the photo of al-Mukhtar: "The true spirit of a true Muslim. O Allah give us the faith and spirit of our forefathers (Salaf) whose feet was firm on the battlefield and whose hearts were strong and full of love for Islam and feared none but you O ALLAH AMEEN".

Atwell began to proclaim his jihad in his FB messaging clearly showing his state of mind and his commitment to jihad. The authorities in Trinidad missed the messaging totally.

An FB post by Atwell's mother giving her opinion on her son and his actions.

A true believer would accept death any day over oppression. And a true believer must do everything in his or her power to remove themselves from under oppression without fearing death. For it is more pleasing to ALLAH for a believer to stand up and fight against oppression and die in the process than for a believer to sit down and just accept oppression because he or she is afraid of death.

DEATH IS ONLY AN INVITATION FROM ALLAH TO ME MEET HIM IN PERSON.

And they say the Qur'an is a book of killing and not the bible and the bible is a book of peace and it encourages you to love everyone despite of there sins or even if they are worshipping a false god or belong to a religion other than what GOD has prescribed. The bible reads are such great liars they read one thing and tell you something else. And yes the Qur'an instructs Muslims to kill people for violating the sanctity of the sacredness of GOD just as your laws and constitution instructs you to hang people to death, electrocute them or kill them by lethal injection for violating certain laws of the land and i believe in my humble opinion GOD LAWS is more deserving of respect than the laws of man.

A mashup of Atwell and his ever present smirk and Atwell in death, murdered by Rasta City, the rivals of the gang that ruled in his area in Laventille .

During the time that Atwell was alive, the man who was a key player in the Enterprise area, was Selwyn Alexis aka Robocop. The boss of Jamaat al-Muslimeen Yasin abu-Bakr officiated at the funeral of Alexis. Bakr also officiated at the funeral of Hassan Atwell praising him as a hero.

Scanny Martin after he was killed by the police, in a shootout at the Port of Spain General Hospital. The hulking Martin above right was one of the men charged in the kidnapping and murder of business woman Vindra Naipaul. Click the link for more info <http://nazaritze-lionzman.blogspot.com/2015/09/imam-yasin-abu-bakr-spiritual-head-of.html>

The western secularist mind sees death as a final end. The praxis out of which Martin, Atwell and countless others before and after them view death, is out of the Islamic praxis of shuhada i.e. martyrdom. The pictures in and of themselves were a coup, since they showed individuals who knowingly marched forth to meet death (inghimasi). Atwell and Martin particularly are viewed as martyrs in their various Muslim communities.

This link is of video footage of Martin's funeral

<http://www.tv6tnt.com/sevenpm-news/--Gun-Tribute-At-SkannyS-Funeral-319123031.html>

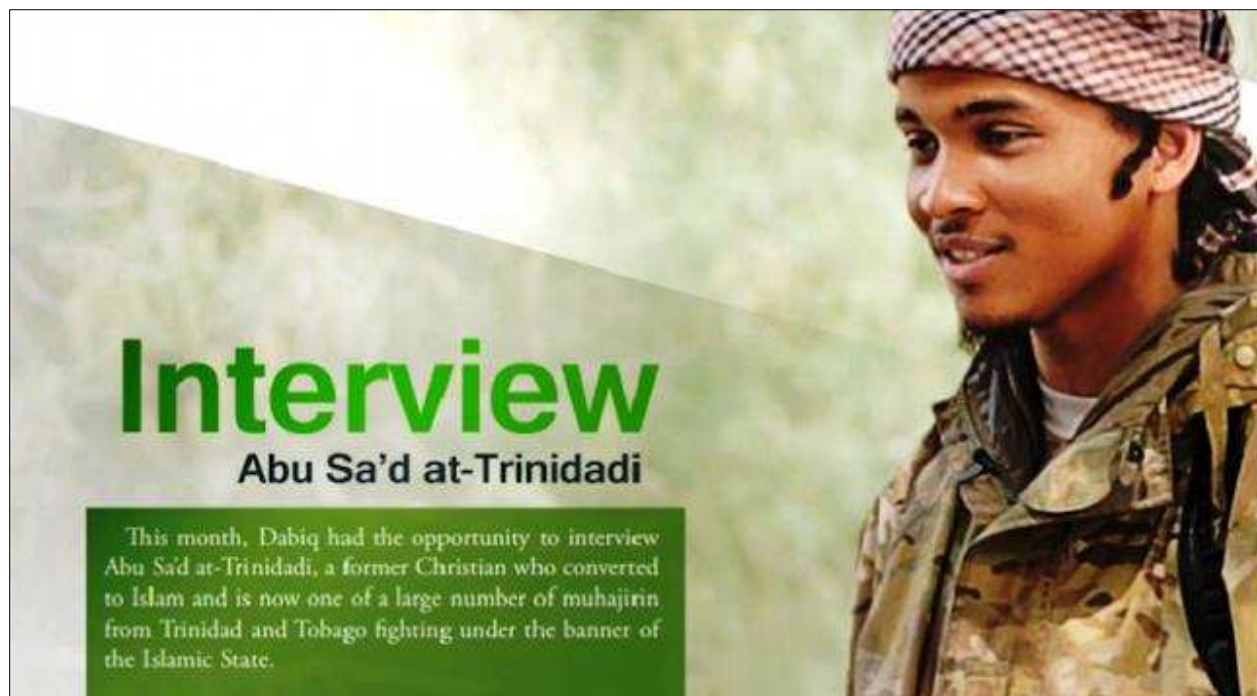

The video is graphic salient proof of the truth of what is written here, Martin a convicted murderer and rapist, was still honored by his peers and cohorts within his "Muslim" community. This spirit has rapidly spread throughout the Caribbean and it's most powerful manifestation on Sint Maarten is within the prison system. It will only be a matter of time before this type of activity begins to manifest itself here when that time arrives the "government", will be woefully unprepared for the fallout.

The Jamaat al-Muslimeen the organization that Atwell and Martin was linked to is a criminal organization, with a pseudo-Islamic façade. The top tier is overseen by clerics, while the rank and file consist of criminal elements, that picture though in recent years has undergone drastic changes.

Above Yasin Abu Bakr at the lectern in his masjid at Mucurapo road in Trinidad. I have written extensively about the Jamaat on this Blog click on the link below for an in depth report from Aljazeera, wherein the Jamaat is featured.

Shawn Crawford aka Abu Sa'd at-Trinidad, the poster boy for Islamic State from Trinidad. Hails from the same Chagaunas Enterprise neighborhood, as Atwell, Robocop and Martin. The latest gang from that area, calling itself the Unruly ISIS gang is an offshoot of Robocop's gang (now deceased Enterprise godfather).

Drastic changes are afoot throughout the Caribbean. Recent releases in the regional media attest to this incontrovertible fact. Three days ago a (today is August 5, 2016), damning article appeared in the Daily herald on Sint Maarten captioned “Martinique issues appeal to locate Rachid Rafaa”. Rachid escaped house arrest on Morne Rouge, Martinique. The following day (8/3/2016), both of these articles appeared side by side in the daily mentioned previously: “Minister concerned about ISIS threat in Caribbean” and Trinidadians held in Turkey for Alleged ISIS Involvement. The information is damning for several reasons. The primary reason that information is as a result of the article in Dabiq issue #15, wherein an ISIS member whose operative duty, within the terrorist organization is to kill enemy combatant’s as a sniper. The article contained this photo. He said the following: “Alhamdulillah, I am currently one of many snipers in the ranks of the mujahidin here in the Caliphate. I head out regularly with my team and get to take part in many fierce battles against the various enemies of the Islamic State.

The man shown in the photo . He was referred to in the article as Abu Sa'd at-Trinidad. When asked in Dabiq: What message would you like to direct to the Muslims of Trinidad? In the article he explicitly calls for suicide attacks in Trinidad: "The first part of my message is to those who claim Islam and yet blindly follow the muftis and imams: In calling you to vote for the taghut leaders they are calling you to commit kufr, yet you obey and follow them, thereby apostatizing. I say to you, fear Allah and return to the religion. Return to the book of Allah and the Sunnah of our beloved prophet, for they are sufficient for us as a guide. Do not become deluded and allow yourselves to follow these evil leaders. Read the biography of our beloved prophet so you can see how he dealt with various matters. Following the palace scholars is not from the religion of truth. Fear Allah as he should be feared, and wake up and come back to the true religion before it's too late.

To those I know who have learned the sound creed, I say, what is the matter with you? You've been deceived and deluded by the devil. Years have gone by and you still haven't performed hijrah to the land of Islam, your land, the place that we used to speak about and dream of. It has become a reality, and yet you've become from amongst those who remained behind. You wanted your children to live in a land where Allah's law is the highest, yet you now remain in a place where you have no honor and are forced to live in humiliation, subjugated by the disbelievers. Do not be from those about whom Allah mentioned in the noble Qur'an. "Indeed, those whom the angels take [in death] while wronging themselves – [the angels] will say, 'In what [condition] were you?' They will say, 'We were oppressed in the land.' The angels will say, Was not the earth of Allah spacious [enough] for you 'to emigrate therein?' For those, their refuge is Hell – and evil it is as a destination" (An-Nisa 97). Who were they? They were the ones that did not perform hijrah to the land of Islam. I also say to you, my brothers, that you now have a golden opportunity to do something that many of us here wish we could do right now. You have the ability to terrify the disbelievers in their own homes and make their streets run with their blood. Where is your jealousy for the religion? They are bombing your brothers and sisters day and night in the land where Allah's law is supreme. It is an obligation upon you to act and force them to think thrice before bombing the Muslims. Therefore, terrorize the disbelievers and make them feel fear everywhere, even in their own bedrooms. Due to their mere disbelief, their blood by default is lawful to spill. How much more obligatory is it to do so after they've waged war against the Muslims and killed their women and children. For this reason, amongst others, the Islamic State leadership emphasized the importance not to differentiate between disbelieving soldiers and their so-called "civilians." Attack the interests of the Crusader coalition near you, including their embassies, businesses, and "civilians." Burn down their government institutions just as they try to bomb our buildings where Allah's law is upheld. Follow the example of the lions in France and Belgium, the example of the blessed couple in California, and the examples of the knights in Orlando and Nice. If you do so then your reward is with Allah and you will have no regrets when you meet Him. If, however, you abandon your brothers while continuing to live in the shade of an enemy at war with Islam, within a petty distance from many Crusader interests, then do not be shocked if Allah strips you of the speck of faith remaining in your dying hearts, as a punishment for your sin and insincerity".

Trinidad as a result of its large Muslim population and the endemic racialism, between the Hindu community and the African Trinidad community, is a divided, racially polarized community. Endemic corruption within the police, judiciary and government along with porous borders, are all social realities that are conducive to the program of not only recruitment, but also direct attacks in a western theatre, containing high levels of Europeans, Americans and Canadians, all of whom are groups of people either resident, or travel to the region on a yearly basis as tourists. The abiding reality regionally is one of a highly penetrable soft target, allied to the American led coalition attacking the Islamic State (ISIS/ISIL), in Iraq and Syria.

The ability of Caribbean governments to combat terrorism is minuscule and the ability and capabilities of terrorist entities, their proxies and affiliates to inflict damage, regionally is well documented and huge.

The man called Sa'd at-Trinidadi in the interview previously boasted that: "We would weigh all of our options as we awaited our opportunity for hijrah. At the same time, we knew that we couldn't just sit and dream while doing nothing, so whenever the disbelievers in Trinidad would kill or harm a Muslim, we would take revenge. We would work to accumulate money in order to buy weapons and ammo. Alhamdulillah, we were successful in many operations, and this was only by Allah's grace.

Abu 'Abdillah, my wife, and I were arrested at one point, but the police weren't able to make a case against us. We were nonetheless charged for possessing guns and ammunition. They seized my computer and phones and found the videos, books, and lectures on jihad. The taghut government of Trinidad then plotted against us, claiming that we were planning on assassinating the prime minister and a number of other ministers in order to cause chaos and panic in the country. That would have been an honor for us to attempt, but the reality of our operations was much smaller, as I described before. We were imprisoned for terrorism along with some Muslims who merely knew us as well as others whom we had never even met before. Alhamdulillah, they planned and plotted but Allah is the best of planners. They were unable to make a case against us and we were freed, by Allah's permission, and despite being placed under surveillance, we went back to doing what we knew we had to do, commanding the good and prohibiting the evil. (The so called State of Emergency in Trinidad, the state claimed that criminals were fighting over drug turf, here the terrorist openly boast's that it was him and his friends, who were responsible for eliminating those who had : "whenever the disbelievers in Trinidad would kill or harm a Muslim, we would take revenge". I wrote many articles, showing the dangerous government practice in Trinidad of deliberately obfuscating the facts pertinent to reportage, of terrorist activity in Trinidad.

Terrorist activity there is usually; called “criminal activity” and terrorists are referred to as criminals in an attempt to appear internationally, as a “safe”, country. The facts of the out of control crime wave and the known terrorist activity in Trinidad since the early, eighties is well known internationally and well documented. As I said the articles in the Herald are damning since they expose the inability of regional governments to combat terrorism. As I have indicated innumerable, tourism will all but cease to exist in this region, under a sustained terrorist campaign. Regional governments will be forced to cooperate on a variety of levels, including, regional security, intra-regional information exchanges, intra-regional travel, intra-regional import and exportation of goods and services, visa and work permit’s within the region and increasingly the exchange and sharing of profiles of Caribbean citizens involved in terrorist activity, or affiliated to terrorist organizations.

Dabiq: After making the decision to perform hijrah to the Levant with two of your closest friends, Abu ‘Abdillah and Abu ‘Isa, you experienced some delay. What happened?

Abu Sa’d at-Trinidadi: The three of us decided to make hijrah to the Levant and join the Islamic State after witnessing the plight of the Muslims in the Levant, but we had some unfinished business with some disbelievers who had wronged the Muslims in the community. Our tickets were already booked, and we were ready to depart within a week but we felt guilty leaving without finishing what needed to be taken care of. It was a difficult decision, and it was for this reason that we would later look back at this moment and say that perhaps it was a final test from Allah to see if we were worthy of being granted the honor of hijrah and jihad. As painful as it was, we decided to delay our hijrah, and there soon came an opportunity to exact revenge on the two kafir criminals we were hunting.

The operation was carried out in the middle of the city in broad day light and was caught on camera. It wasn’t our plan for it to occur that way, but it happened according to Allah’s decree. Following the operation, Abu ‘Abdillah and Abu ‘Isa were arrested, and I went into hiding. We decided that we had to leave Trinidad nonetheless because nothing was going to stop our hijrah, by Allah's permission. Once more, Allah bestowed a tremendous favor on us as Abu 'Isa was released pending investigation. Abu 'Abdillah was also released and we left Trinidad one-by-one. I left first along with my wife, followed by Abu 'Abdillah, and then Abu 'Isa, and we met up in Venezuela. We had missed our original flights so we had to stay there for some time until we were able to book new flights”.

A CHANGING CARIBBEAN: FROM CARIBBEAN TO CALIPHATE.

A report on Al Jazeera People & Power sent correspondent Juliana Ruhfus and director Dom Rotheroe to investigate how the Caribbean island nation of Trinidad has become a recruitment hub for ISIL. Here is the video link to that report: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=ugCv9SZygzI>

The warning that I issued in 2003 is now a reality, in the book that I wrote and published in 2003 entitled Rastafari and its Hindu Origins: “The Caribbean region will figure greatly in the upcoming years as a region that is part of the Arab-Israeli question the island of Trinidad and Tobago has gone unnoticed in international circles as a haven for extremist rhetoric . The attempted coup by the Jamaat al Muslimeen leadership is an example of Muslim extremism in the region. The extremist Muslim organization based in Trinidad will prove to be a security threat in the region in years to come (we are now in 2017), the tendency of Arab extremist's to train and finance Muslim extremists in other parts of the world has also proven true in Trinidad and Tobago. The Jamaat al Muslimeen have been linked to kidnapping, extortion, illegal weapons trade, cocaine trafficking, and many illegal activities.

Here several videos of Avinash Seepersad aka Krysis a primary figure within the Unruly ISIS gang of the Chaguanas Enterprise area on Trinidad.

The Imam of Krysis is Umar Abdullah, an infamous former member of Jamat al-Muslimeen who was a leading figure in the 1990 coup in Trinidad

Seepersad and his affiliates have several YouTube accounts on which they upload their videos threatening rivals and bragging about murders in so-called Rap music videos. This link shows Krysis with his Imam and several high ranking police officials

The YouTube account Pablo Escobar is the official account of the gang.

The clown at left Avinash Seepersad was referred to in the video by Al Jazeera as an 'Imam', nothing could be farther from the truth. An Islamic scholar is an individual who is well versed in Arabic and who received Sharia training usually in the Middle East from known Islamic scholars. Avinash Seepersad is a well-known criminal and Youtube personality in Trinidad who is a cheerleader for the well-known and ruthless gang called Unruly ISIS. The fool Seepersad forgot to take down all of his Youtube video's showing the type of illiterate thug that he is.

A photo of the semi-literate drug addled criminal Avinash Seepersad, referred to by Al Jazeera as an Imam.

Above Umar Abdullah a personal friend of Mustafa the man shown in the Al Jazeera video report as being the Emir or commander of the Trinidadian fighters in the Islamic State. The man shown above Abdullah said that he was one of the men involved in the coup led by Abu Bakr to establish an Islamic State in Trinidad. This man is also the Imam of Krysia; this is also the same neighborhood that produced Scanny Martin and Hassan Atwell, this is also the area where Shawn Crawford lived. <http://nazaritze-lionzman.blogspot.com/2017/04/hassan-atwell-and-scanny-martin-they.html>

When the attack comes in the Caribbean it will originate from Trinidad, but will not be limited to Trinidad, the crisis will metastasize regionally. The lies told by and that are continuing to be told by the former Minister of Defense Gary Griffith in Trinidad is a fantasy spouted by a delusional man, that only or mainly lumpens and thugs are leaving Trinidad for Syria and Iraq because they are being paid a thousand dollars a month by the Islamic State, personal contacts and the magazines of the Islamic State and other independent media in Syria all prove that the money being given to foreign fighters is about $250-$750 US dollars a month. Here is a video showing a Trinidad lawyer whose family is prominent within that society, so much so that he is hidden from public scrutiny, to the point where Jorgen Toedenhoffer does not even mention his name or where he is from. Here is the video: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=8oDeTbggnzY>

The future of the Caribbean depends on the full cooperation of governments on a scale never before witnessed, in this region. The habit of depending on western European countries, America and Canada, no longer can suffice, a hands on regional approach is the only solution to the very real issue of Caribbean terrorism and terrorist organizations in the region.
